Category:Public opinion Category:Elections in SpainStructural and functional mitochondrial cardiolipin hydroperoxides in apoptosis and aging. Mitochondrial cardiolipin is the precursor of the only known mitochondrial lipid peroxidation product, mitochondrial cardiolipin hydroperoxide (CL-OOH). CL-OOH is the only known cytotoxic compound in human mitochondria that can induce necrosis through a direct cytotoxic effect. This review deals with the detection and quantification of CL-OOH, its structural and functional effects, the role of CL-OOH in apoptosis and aging, and how to prevent CL-OOH formation and toxicity.The morphology and topography of the ACL and its innervation. This study provides a comprehensive, high-resolution account of the morphology and topography of the anterior cruciate ligament and its innervation. The knee is a highly complex, interconnected bony and soft-tissue system. The mechanical axis of the joint is a strong determinant of both the resultant laxity of the knee and the direction of injury to the ligament. The anatomy of the ACL, which appears relatively simple, has received less attention than other aspects of the knee. Dissection was carried out on 12 knees obtained from fresh cadavera (12 knees from 8 male and 2 female subjects). The results indicate that the vast majority of relevant aspects of the anatomy can be studied in great detail using only a single incision to expose the knee joint. The thickness of the anterior wall of the joint was approximately twice that of the posterior wall. The fibers appeared to be arranged in a ribbon-like pattern along the proximal and distal portions of the tibia, with both the superior and inferior fibers forming the posterior border of the intercondylar notch. A prominent pyramidal (lanceolate) shape was present along the anterior half of the anterior tibial surfaces. The posterior cruciate ligament was thick, long, and extended substantially beyond the tibial plateau. The most superior aspect of the midportion of the tibia was occupied by the posterior horn of the lateral meniscus. The anterolateral and posteromedial bundles of the ACL were present at the anterolateral and posteromedial aspects of the central body. The vastus medialis and the lateral head of the rectus femoris were found to act as tibial depressors. The primary mode of tibial attachment was 570a42141b
