For example, I have a file which I'm reading in and iterating over, and each object has different attributes. I'm converting these to a JSON string for a specific purpose in my app. However, I don't want to have to create a new object/file for each attribute. Would GSON be able to use the file object/attributes and then create the JSON string? Example: class Dogs { String name; String color; } //someObject -> {name: dog, color: brown} Dog dogA = new Dog(); dogA.name = "dogA"; dogA.color = "brown"; //someObject -> {name: dog, color: white} Dog dogB = new Dog(); dogB.name = "dogB"; dogB.color = "white"; JSONParser parser = new JSONParser(); //I know I could use someObject.toJson(), but I want to be able to do this inplace String json = parser.convert(someObject); System.out.println(json); I'm thinking of something along the lines of someObject.toJson(parser), but obviously that's invalid. A: You can use Gson annotations in Java to automatically serialize/deserialize objects of a certain type. E.g. import com.google.gson.*;

class Dog { String name; String color; @Override public String toString() { return "{" +
"name=" + name + ", color=" + color + "}"; } } Gson gson = new Gson(); Dog dogA = new Dog(); dogA.name = "dogA"; dogA.color = "
