Breadcrumb Students at the Kunapipi school in Warrnambool, Victoria are the beneficiaries of a new system developed by the Water Foundation, which will provide them with a better understanding of how rainwater runs off the roof. The new Raindrop system is the result of a project involving students from the Water Foundation and its partners. The Water Foundation is a non-profit organisation that aims to promote sustainable use of freshwater resources and awareness of water security. The Foundation is supported by the Australian and Victorian Governments, and has a strong network of partners and supporters. The students are in Year 6 at a primary school in Warrnambool, where rainwater runs off the roof in one of the toilets. Under a pilot project supported by the Water Foundation, the students have spent eight months building a raindrop out of recycled plastic bottles, while also studying water science. The students were given a five minute lesson on how their raindrop works, which explains how the bottles can be used to gather water on their roof, and which rainwater that gets into the bottles will be used for. They also built a scale-model

A case-control study was conducted to determine the serum concentrations of copper and zinc in type 2 diabetes mellitus patients in a teaching hospital in Nigeria. Of the 100 patients, there were 53 male and 47 female subjects and 50 healthy controls. Blood samples were analysed for serum zinc and copper. The mean Zn value for the male patients was significantly lower than those of both male and female controls (p Q: Creating a Timer that counts down to a specific number of seconds in Javascript I am creating a web page for a computer game that uses Javascript to solve problems. Currently it is a game that involves getting a single number from the user in a 'get' function and then using a 'get' and a 'put' function to solve the problem. It is a series of if statements that are used until the appropriate input is received from the user, and the script then moves to the next set of problems. This all works fine, however I am wanting to make a timer function to allow people to enter one or more times that their own difficulty. So what I am wondering is how I would
