Gone in 60 Seconds
Gone in 60 Seconds is a 1996 comedy-drama film directed by John Stockwell. It is the fourth and final installment in the

"Gone in 60 Seconds" film series, following 1995's Heist. The film was released on July 10, 1996 in the United States and Canada, where it was distributed by TriStar Pictures. The film follows Nick Davenport (Mark Wahlberg), a man with amnesia who finds himself being chased by a group of robbers. The film was met with a mixed reception from critics. On Rotten Tomatoes, it has a 50% "Rotten" rating with an average rating of 4.6/10, based on 9 reviews. Plot Losing his amnesia in the car accident that drove him to this point, Nick Davenport (Mark Wahlberg) runs away from the hospital. After moving back in with his parents, they let him continue to live in the garage. He lives a difficult life on the streets, falling in with a group of companions. Nick is approached by Charlotte Richards (Naomi Watts), who intends to return to her home in Africa. After a series of events, the trio get a job as drivers and look for clients that can give them $350,000. The group gets an assignment to take a briefcase containing $7 million, and Nick gets the job of driving the vehicle. As the getaway vehicle approaches its destination, Nick and his new friends are attacked by the Great White, led by Bill Garrison (Donald Sutherland). He cuts off the driver's side window and tells them to jump. Charlotte tries to warn them not to do so, but they are all thrown from the vehicle when it goes over the waterfall. Investigating the scene, Nick is taken into custody. While at the police station, he is forced to identify a photo of a wanted criminal, a man who is responsible for Charlotte's death. His identification of the criminal gets him sympathy from a detective named Ford (Sam Rockwell), who helps him break out. Together, they escape to Billy's house, where Nick is reunited with his father. Nick 595f342e71
