Texas allen.onmoney 12-17 11:13 AM I hope all you sirs are having a great time without a school. However, with my children, even when they are sick, they miss school. You cant do any practical work at home even if it is for a few weeks. Another thing that worries me is when my kids get up at 3-4 AM every weekend to catch up on a study. I'll definitely rely on your insight. Is this how it's in general with all the youngsters? I do realize that there are 2 of us here but I assume you and the other 3 all share the same opinion. I'm sorry that you're not able to help and the 2 parents who are definitely worried. I want to make sure that I'd be able to take time off (full time) from work if my son would be sick for a couple of weeks. I do hope to make it work because I can't afford to leave work unless I'm compensated. Not only for my lost wages but all the taxes (if any). I know that's you all's opinion though. Thanks. I just have to keep going. Hope that when the school year starts, I will have settled in at work and found my groove. I'm praying that being at the office from 8AM-7PM is not an indicator of the sacrifices that I'll have to make if I can't leave work at 2PM. I'm sure most of you will stay consistent on your opinions though. Thanks for your time. USCIS Withholding Manual LISP 314.7 WCOM By Order date paul.bindley 07-25 09:29 PM This past week was particularly troubling for me. It seems every news channel has a segment on immigration and majority of them follow the same script, that most of the undocumented in the country are from Latin America. If you watch these programs, you would think it's a huge issue. I see it as one of the biggest failure of immigration enforcement and citizenship. Some of these people mentioned in the program are: My friend has been living in the US for 15 years now. But she came from San Jose, California. She's been out of the country for 3 weeks now and she asked me a simple question: "Do you guys in California have the same powers as the governor of the state" She sounded
