Patients with IBD are currently poorly served by the health system in Norway. A Norwegian guideline was developed, based on literature, and consensus to provide recommendations for nursing care of these patients. The aim was to evaluate its implementation and assess to what extent nursing staff in outpatient gastroenterology care follow the guideline. A conceptually-based case study design. Ten participants were included. Semi-structured interviews with a think-aloud method were conducted to explore the respondents' reasoning process. Content analysis was used to explore the guideline. Nurses viewed the guideline positively, but expressed a need for more practical recommendations and a more thorough explanation of the guideline. They also expressed a need for a more concrete evaluation and more communication with physicians.I am the husband of Bethany and the father of Jordan. It is even more essential to look after your skin now that you have oily skin. Don't forget to follow this routine if you want to keep your oily skin under check. Exfoliation Exfoliation is extremely important if you have a dry skin or oily skin and it is easier to exfoliate your skin if you are making use of a scrub. Scrubs may be abrasive to your skin, so try to use them sparingly. Sugar scrubs are one of the most commonly used and widely used scrubs because of their gentle and effective nature. Lathering When you use your cleanser, work it through your skin so that the product gets absorbed into the skin. While you are applying it, massage your skin to ensure that you completely let it penetrate into your skin. While applying this skincare product, use both hands for thoroughly massaging the product. Most people are unaware of the fact that, the more you massage the skin, the better it gets. The cleansing process is complete once you have lathered your skin. If your skin is dry, it is a good idea to use gentle skincare products so that you do not make it excessively dry. You could use toning or moisturizing products, too. Moisturize You need to moisturize your skin after exfoliation because the exfoliator may remove the top layers of the skin. You need to
