
Ex4decompilerv22015cracked ~UPD~

I remove the following references, but still there is the errors: Package: ex4decompilerv22015cracked Pin: release unsigned Pin-Priority: 1001 The only reference I didn't remove is the version-information. Any ideas what could be the cause? A: I am not sure it is possible to install the same package with different version (in your case 0.1) into Homebrew environment without unwanted conflicts.

Try this: brew rm -f ex4decompilerv22015cracked* brew install ex4decompilerv22015cracked # Verify brew cask info ex4decompilerv22015cracked Also be aware that this solution is not universal so you may still encounter conflicts. Please consider updating Homebrew to latest version in order to have better support for managing different versions of the same package. Homebrew version 22.0.0.rb4 Download latest binary from Homebrew website. Homebrew Cask version 22.0.0.rb4 Download latest binary from Homebrew Cask website. A: (Related to "How to install package using different versions?" question) OK, I found the problem. It was that Homebrew was using outdated version of ex4decompilerv22015cracked package. I had to update it manually using Homebrew update command. I had the same problem, not the same package as it was installed from brew on an older macOS. Also was using ex4decompilerv22015cracked version 0.1. In this case manually updating Homebrew's version of the package didn't solve the problem as it used different version number. Not sure why Homebrew would use outdated version, but at least it works now. A: I have the same problem, and found out that it is because of the Homebrew updates. So, when you open the Terminal.app from your MacOS, type in brew update This should update the Homebrew automatically, and it solved my issue.
