Comprehension Readiness Tests for: Academic Skills Language Arts Math Practical Implications of UNI-DBScope-Based Audit of the Quality of Neurological EPs in the United States. The use of the Uniform National Electronic Medical Record Systems (UNI-DBScope) has demonstrated the value of point-of-care auditing in other fields of medicine. This study aimed to determine whether the use of UNI-DBScope-based audits of neurology resident practice is feasible, if neuroepidemiologists are interested in conducting them, and how such audits might yield useful feedback. An electronic survey was developed to assess neurology resident audit frequency and scope, and neurology resident and faculty audit participation. A total of 136 of 190 (71%) neurology residency program directors (PDs) responded to the survey. Approximately one third of respondents estimated an annual audit to be "worthwhile" or "very worthwhile." Eighty-three percent of PDs had an electronic medical record implementation strategy in place. An estimated 3.7% of all cases reviewed (mean of 17 cases per program) would have been triggered by an audit (p Q: Can I replace an OLED display with a LCD one?
