Iran's nuclear chief denies claims the country is preparing for war Wire services By: STAFF | November 19, 2006 9:24 AM EST LONDON (AP) -- An arms store in a Paris suburb closed Saturday and a man told police he wanted to kill himself and others inside after declaring "God is good" in Arabic, which the Paris prosecutor's office said was an apparent suicide attack. The French security forces put on maximum security alert following the incident, which came hours after the re-election of French President Jacques Chirac. Early Sunday, Paris police arrested a man who had not been identified and later took away a pistol, the prosecutor's office said. The security alert was lifted, but the investigators were to be kept on a 24-hour alert. The man used the Arabic phrase "Allah" during the attack, or "God is Good," officials said. Interior Minister Nicolas Sarkozy said French intelligence agencies had alerted the government before the attack. He said he had taken a precautionary measure before leaving for a trip to Rome, telling the security forces to be ready. The man, believed to be from Africa, reportedly told police he was Iraqi and wanted to go to Iraq, the prosecutor's office said. Investigators said they were looking into the possibility of a failed plot. PARIS (AP) -- 'The man told police he wanted to kill himself and others inside 6d1f23a050
