A: I would find a less guilty root cause - what are the contents of your config.xml for your module? In it, there are instructions for the module. Are they there? Are they complete? Are they complete for the version of the module that is deployed? Obviously, finding the culprit is the first step, so we don't need to dig into all this other stuff. A: The XML schema for the.net 3.5 Web Service assembly is a different format. With this format, the root element will be "configuration". It will look like this The "system" element is what you need to add. /* * Copyright (c) 2014, 2016, Oracle and/or its affiliates.
